attendance.

Isaac W. Hall was born in Mellwood township, Guernsey county, in 1810, when the county was yet unrescued from the wilderness. His father, John Hall, emigrated from South Carolinia to Ohio in 1805, preferring to face the dangers of the uniried wilderness rather than amid the diesh-pots of slavery in the South. He was married to Phoebe Webster, and Isaac W., was their second son. After a common school education he engaged in the mercantile business in Quaker City, then the town of Mellwood, when but nineteen years old, and during the sixty-xix years of his residence there he steadily grew in wealth and in the esteem of his fellows until at his death. He was at once the wealthiest and the most respected citizen of the town and community. He was three times married, the first time to Margaret Thomas, by whom he had one child who is now Mrs. Hugh Keenan; the second time to Elizabeth Vall, by whom he had one son, John R. Hall, now cashier at the Quaker City National Bank; the third time to Sarah Gumere, who survives him, Always a faithful member of the church, as were his parents before him, he was also a man of enterprise and rare business ability, combining with all an honesty that was never questioned and a gentlessness of heart that is rarely in honesty that was never questioned and an honesty that was never questioned and a gentlessness of heart that is rarely found. He loved good, the true the beautiful. Children and flowers afforded him delight at all times. No man was more loyal to the banner of the union during the dark days of rebellion and no man gave of his money more freely to forward the end we looked to. A devoted Republican at I times, he never aweryed saide by any heresies, believing implicity Republican at all times, henever swerved aside by any heresies, believing implicitly in the mission and the future of his party, and giving liberally of his wealth to the campaign fund of his party, he was a model partisan. He was connected with every enterprise of moment that has been projected in this county for the last half century. At the time of his death he was a stockholder and a director of the Central National bank of Cambridge, President of the Quaker City National bank, and a stockholder and director of the Baltimore & Ohio raliroad, Central Ohio

A Suit which Revives Mecollections of Sla

A remarkable case is pending before the Supreme Court of this city which presents several perplexing problems among them the question, Can a former slave inherit property? The suit, which is one of a series, is brought by Albert M. Thomas, colored, formerly a slave, to recover valuable real estate in this city, now held by other parties, but once the property of Thomas's father, who escaped from slavery to this city. The plaintiff is a colored man of considerable ability. The defense claims that he is not the legiti-mate son of the man claimed as his father. Over 200 witnesses figure in the case Most of them are ex-slaves or ex-slave masters, whose depositions were taken by Commissioners of the South. The case shounds in touching details, which are tere summarized.

here summarized.

Fifty-eight years ago a slave named James L. Thomas, belonging on the Shrewsbury estate, near Charlestown, W.
Va., got tired of living in bondage and left the old plantation with a boatload of watermelons belonging to his master.

Among those who mourned his leave was a dustry with and two some albert M and Among those who mourned his leave was a dusky wile and two sons, Albert M. and Aaron Thomas. Nobody ever heard what became of the watermeions, but after a long and perilous pligrimage the refugee himself arrived in Buffalo. As cook and catere he became well off, and married a second wife. Years after Albert Thomas, whom his father had left behind as a child, ran awar from slavor, reached (lance by whom his father had left behind as a child, ran away from slavery, reached Canada by the undergreund railway, and after many adventurce brought up in Bulfalo. After a few years in business here he went to Ratiegh, Tenn., ran a hotel, and took a third wife. While there his father left Buffalo for California and died there. His widow by his second marriage subsequently sold the property in this city to various parties, and three years ago, when Albert learned that she, too, was dead, he left his hotel at Raleigh and came on here to claim the estate. Thousands of dollars have already been sport in the case, and the contest is nowhere near the end yet. A son of the paintiff is a graduate of Yale, and is a bright young colored lawyer of this city.

A man and wife enjoying a walk to gether, or a tete-a-tete sweetened by confidential and affectionate conversation, is a sight beautiful before God and man. But too often the picture is reversed. He saunters out with her, carelees and uninterested, scarcely, during the walk, uttering a word. Is not this, to say the least, a great abuse of the science of silence? In the hour of absence and of solicitude the husband is impressed with a sonse of the amiable dismeition and demeanor of his wife, of her unwearied endeavors to promote and perpetuate his happiness, and of its being his bounden duly to show, by the most unequivocal expressions of attachment and of tenderness, his full approbation are not forthcoming, and, with a mistaken silence, he shrinks from honoring his wife and represses those few words of page which she so well deserves. which a histance silence, he shrinks from honoring his wife and represes those few words of praise which she so well deserves and would so greatly appreciate. Tyler's Second Wife.

Watterow's Recollections.

A few years ago a friend loaned me a book containing the reminiscences of Mr. Wise. In it he says that he was riding out one evening with President Tyler, who informed him that he was going to marry Miss Gardner. "Why," said Wise, "ahe is too young for you," "Not at all," replied the President; "I'm still in my prime." "That reminds me," continued Wise, "of an old darky down in Virginia who was generally consulted by his old master on any affairs of importance to both. The old master was a widower, and when he got the consent of ayoung lady to marry him he communicated the fact to the old darky. 'My Lord,' said Sambo, 'she is too young for you.' "Not a bit of it,' abswered the master; 'I'm still in my prime.' "Yes,' responded Sambo, 'you are in your prime now, but wait till alse gets in her prime, then where will your prime be?"'

A POSITIVE CURE FOR Drunkenness

Maedical.

OR THE LIQUOR HABIT. ..

It can be given in a cup of coffee or tea without the knowledge of the person taking it, is absolutely harmiess, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure where the patient is a modeaute drinker of an alcoholic wreck. It has been given in thousands of cases, and in every instance a perfect cure has followed. IT. NEVER FALLS. The system once impreparated with the Specific It, becomes an utter impossibility for the liquor appetite to exist. GOLDEN SPECIFIC CO., Prop'rs, Cin For sale by LOGAN & CO.
